His imaging reveals no acute injury or abnormality.

He has no pain or limitation or hesitation with full range of motion of the neck, and therefore unlikely a ligamentous injury.

His symptoms of mild headaches and memory problems, are most likely related to a post-concussive syndrome.

He has a normal neuro exam, and I feel that a CVA would be very unlikely to be causing memory problems, given they started after the accident.

He feels reassured with the results, and wants to go home.

He does not have a PMD, but is working on establishing with one.

Referred to the "no doc" on call physician for a 1 time followup, and strict return precautions discussed.

Stable for discharge and outpatient management with close PMD followup.

Strict return precautions discussed.

The treatment plan and assessment were discussed with patient and any accompanying family members. Based on the available clinical information (including history, physical exam, and lab and/or imaging studies), I do not believe the patient needs admission at this time. They have been stable during the course in the ED with improvement in their symptoms. The patient has been advised to return with any worsening or change in condition.

IMPRESSION:

1. Post concussion syndrome

CONDITION PRIOR TO DISPOSITION: Stable

DISPOSITION: discharge home with primary healthcare practitioner follow up
